

SOUNDS FOR PEACE

We want to wake up our era. We want to give our generation a different rhythm, a new beat. The world must change tune.

We, the Sounds for Peace, are not afraid to say out loud what we believe in and what we want to do with our songs. Our sound is clear, and you can recognise it. You will hear it every time we need to raise the volume of our music to respond to violence, racism, despise and war.

Music has a true power of change and it can transform the world. We, the Sounds for Peace, are aware we have the right instruments to do so, to be heard! We do not want to sing messages of hatred, but music for peace, music that moves hearts and minds, music that brings men and women together and leads them to lift up their eyes and open up to beauty, to peace, to God.

Music is universal: it touches everyone's heart. We, the Sounds for Peace, want to make it a true power of change as it has often been in History. But music, in some instances, can also draw out the worst from human souls, offering messages of violence, full of hatred, racist slogans.

We believe that in order to do good music, it is necessary to confront reality, to see things with one's own eyes, to touch what one speaks of. We, the Sounds for Peace, want to collect this challenge and show that with our music we can change things.

Our music is characterized by harmony, because in a chord all elements have a place, without prevailing over the others, and each contribution makes all the others better.

Our music is subversive, because we want to remind everyone that a different world is possible.

Our music is made of rhythm, because we do not want to be still, we want to move with others and change the world around us.

Our music wants to touch hearts and minds, and with the power of its tune it communicates our desire for a better world.

Our music requires a commitment from us, and we want to commit ourselves for a different world, which does not forget people in their loneliness.

Music is for everyone: it should be played with others and for others, because we believe that everything in life, starting with music, is more beautiful if it is not done for oneself.

That is why we commit ourselves:

- Never to use the universal language of music to sow hatred or preach despise;
- To draw our musical inspiration from important and relevant themes: peace, solidarity, racism, violence, war, respect for life, the death penalty, different cultures living together;
- To change the world, conscious that the beauty of music can contribute to resonate and spread positive messages, which unify and do not divide.

Long live music! Long live the Sounds for Peace!
